Inspiration

Growing up as a young kid, I always wanted to have an identity of my own, and also losing my parents at the young age made me realise that life is not a piece of cake. I wanted to achieve greater heights in life and make a mark in the society. I wanted to be an inspiration to those orphans who think that this world has been harsh to them. I wanted them to realise that we can still dream and have a better future and success. Not only that; but I wanted them to realise that we can be the change makers in the society and create the world around us of how we actually dream it to be.

For me being a role model in today's date and people around me matters the most. But at the same time, that same importance means self acceptance. It's then when we realise that being accepted by the world is not everything. But setting the example of accepting and loving oneself is when the world learns to accept us. After all example is set only when we learn to Truly live that life which we believe is genuine.

Message to the youth:

Today our younger generation are in a pressure to give their best; considering the competitive culture that we as humans have adapted. I want you all to know that you don't have to compete with anyone else, but yourself. It's when you truly give your best. Try to be better than who you were yesterday rather than comparing yourself with someone else. Live, breath and grow. No one is perfect and imperfections are a sign that we are human after all. Live a little more extra and sprinkle the smile around! We only live once and so make it worth living .

Ambition:

Ambition is a very big word for me. It's something I would never be able to achieve in this lifetime. Because I dreamt and have always wanted to change the society around me ; breaking stereotypes and setting an example to my fellow humans.

We all know that change doesn't happen in a day but we can always make small changes and contribute towards a better society !! It always starts with I, me!! And change can only happen when it actually starts with yourself!! I'm still learning so much and I believe that the little that I do would someday have a positive impact on maybe few ; but that few does matter to me. As we all know that little drops of water makes a mighty ocean..

Much love to all the readers and hope you too begin today. Don't forget to live your extra life ..
